Gardener's poem

In August's hush, the garden hums,
A symphony of bees and mums—
The thrum of wings, the rustling leaves,
The golden breath of summer eves.
Butterflies flicker through the heat,
On lavender and asters sweet.
The hollyhocks stretch toward the sky,
As if to hold the sun goodbye.
The days grow tired, long and slow,
With golden light in amber glow.
Yet still, the garden does proudly stand—
Wherein Rosie dog will lick your outstretched hand!
